Vol. 14, No. 3 ■ January/February 2002 ■ the newsletter of the Calhoun County (Michigan) Genealogical Society

Curt Witcher to speak about passenger and immigration research, genealogy web sites

The public is invited to attend two presentations by genealogy expert Curt Witcher, Monday, Feb. 25, at the Miller-Stone Building in Battle Creek. No CCGS meeting will be held this month; members are encouraged instead to attend these sessions.

Witcher, whose visit is presented by Willard Library, is department manager for the Historical Genealogy Department of the Allen County Public Library in Fort Wayne, Ind. He will share information about passenger and immigration research and Internet sites for genealogists.

Witcher is widely known in the genealogical community. He has published many works about family history, including the 1987–2001 editions of the Periodical Source Index (PeRSI) and he has received many distinguished awards. He is president of the National Genealogical Society, past president of the Federation of Genealogical Societies, and has participated as a member and officer of many other family history organizations.

Another trip to Allen County library planned for May 18

All are welcome to join the Calhoun County Genealogical Society on a bus trip to the country's second largest genealogical library: Allen County Public Library in Fort Wayne, Ind.

The bus will leave the parking lot of Bill Knapp's Restaurant in Battle Creek (just off I-94 at the Capital Avenue exit) at 8 a.m. At 8:20 a.m. the bus will pick up passengers at the Kmart parking lot in Marshall (near the Michigan Avenue exit off I-69).

Arrival time at the library is 9 a.m. Indiana time/10 a.m. Michigan time. Meals and snacks for the bus are on your own. We will depart the library

Bus trip, continued on p. 27

12–1:30 p.m.: "Passenger and Immigration Research"

Learn about an ancestor's travel to this continent — leaving, arriving and settling — with each step introducing the possibility of record generation. Witcher will present suggestions on how to access immigration-related data.

7–8:30 p.m.: "Mega Internet Sites for Genealogists — Off the Beaten Path"

The number of Internet sites for genealogy continues to grow at an amazing rate. This program looks at large online bibliographic databases that genealogists should use to further their research and important sites for doing more than just "surname surfing." Witcher will also demonstrate successful search strategies. Computer images will be projected onto a large screen. ■

FOCUS THIS ISSUE: beginning genealogy

In addition to information that should help novice genealogists get started, in this issue you'll also find our annual surname directory with membership list. If a member is re-searching a surname you are interested in, you may contact that person and hopefully make a family connection.

In future issues we'll focus on Germany, family reunions and military research.

Have a story, tip or idea to share? Contributions are always encouraged. Write to: Sue Stuever Battel, Editor, SueBattel@aol.com or 21174 F Dr. S., Marshall, MI 49068. ■

Long-time CCGS member Robert Hayward passes

Robert C. Hayward, age 77, of Battle Creek died Nov. 28, 2001, at his residence.

He was born on Sept. 26, 1924, in Battle Creek to Millard C. and Florence M. (Duffy) Hayward. He was a Battle Creek resident most of his life and graduated from Battle Creek Central High School in 1943.

During World War II he served with the U.S. Navy Armed Guard Division as a Signalman 3rd Class Petty Officer.

In 1945, Hayward and his brother-in-law started Brockway Motor Sales, selling used cars and later specializing in foreign cars. He worked at the Kellogg Company for 28 years, retiring in 1986.

He married Shurley Bivens on June 27, 1948. She survives. Also surviving is a son, Michael Charles (Mary Ellen) Hayward, and two grandchildren, all of Galesburg, and a niece and a nephew of Battle Creek. ■

Calhoun County Genealogical Society

The purposes of the Calhoun County Genealogical Society (CCGS) are:

- to gather and preserve information of genealogical value.
- to encourage the deposit of such information in suitable depositories.
- to aid genealogists in the study of family history through the exchange of knowledge.
- to publish and promote Calhoun County and other genealogical materials.

The CCGS is a nonprofit, state-chartered organization. Individuals, libraries or societies may apply for membership. Annual dues for the year beginning Sept. 1 are $12. Memberships are accepted year-round; dues received after May 1 will pay membership for the following year. Members receive the newsletter Generations six times per year.

Meetings are held at 7 p.m. the fourth Tuesday of each month at the B.E. Henry Building, 615 S. Marshall St. in Marshall, unless otherwise specified. No meetings are held in July, August or December. Programs are free and open to the public.

National Archives plans to release 1930 census April 1

Genealogists have been waiting with bated breath for the release of the 1930 federal population census data.

The National Archives will release the 1930 census for the first time April 1, 2002. Micro-filmed copies will be available for research at the National Archives Building in Washington, D.C., at 13 National Archives regional facilities across the nation and through the National Archives rental program.

Some area libraries have ordered the microfilm, but a delivery date is not yet known.

As one would expect, the number of records in the 1930 census is much larger than in any previous census.

While all the returns for the first census conducted in 1790 fit on 12 rolls of microfilm, the country continued to grow to the point that the 1920 census fills 2,076 rolls of film.

The 1930 census consists of 2,667 rolls of population schedules and 1,587 rolls of Soundex indexes for 12 southern states, totaling 4,254 rolls. (Most states, however, do not have Soundex indexes.)

Although the statistical summaries collected by enumerators are made public shortly after the census is taken, access to information on individuals and families is restricted by law for privacy reasons for 72 years. ■

Genealogy gems

Free beginner's genealogy workbook available

The Latter Day Saints' Family History Library has released a genealogy workbook, "How Do I Start My Family History?" designed to help those just beginning to gather and organize their family's genealogy. It replaces the library's popular booklet, "Where Do I Start?"

Users will find simple instructions, examples and 8.5-by-11-inch removable pedigree and family group worksheets to help them capture what they already know about their families.

"How Do I Start My Family History?" is a free booklet. The new publication is available at church distribution centers worldwide and can be ordered by calling (800) 537-5971, or accessing the Internet at www.familysearch.org. Specify item number 32916. ■ at 6 p.m. sharp, Indiana time, and arrive back in Marshall at 8:40 p.m. — in Battle Creek at 9 p.m.

Bus trip, continued from cover

Cost is $19 per person. Please mail your reservation form to CCGS by April 15. You need not be a member to participate. The last two trips sold out, so make your reservations early. A $2 fee will be retained for cancellations made on or before April 15. No refunds will be made after April 15 unless a substitute is available.

Several fast-food and sit-down restaurants are within walking distance of the library.

To prepare for the trip, check out the Allen County Public Library's web site at www.acpl.lib.in.us. You can search the online catalog and prepare a list of books and other materials to research before arrival. To learn more about the Genealogy Department, go to www.acpl.lib.in.us/genealogy/index1.html. ■

A brief primer on BEGINNING THE ANCESTOR HUNT

by Sandy Redmond, CCGS member and genealogy instructor

Establish an objective. What do you want to know? Is your mission to identify as many ancestors in a direct line as possible, or will you focus on all descendants, for example, of your mother's grandparents? Do you want to collect statistics — birth, marriage, names of children, death dates and places — or would you like to create a more complete biography of a smaller number of individuals? Suggestion: work on only one or two lines at a time — choose a grandparent and focus on that line.

Location, location, location. The real estate adage holds especially true in genealogy. Unless you can identify where an ancestor lived, it will (obviously) be impossible to know where to research. Learn to read maps. Find maps from the time period you are researching, and identify any boundaries that may have changed over time.

The first cardinal rule: Always document carefully the source of your findings. This will force you to critique diligently every piece of evidence you collect. Murphy's Law of Genealogy states that you will, inevitably, three years after the fact, need page 93 to go along with page 92, and you can't remember the name of book or library in which you found it!

The second cardinal rule: Start with yourself and work backward. Resist the temptation to hurry to the next generation. The fact that Grandpa lived in the same county as Joe Famous and shares the Famous surname doesn't mean you're related.

- 1) Identify what you already know. Make an ancestor chart, starting with yourself, and complete as much information as you can on as many ancestors as you can identify. Next, fill out a family group sheet for your parents with yourself and your siblings as the children. Then, after you've chosen which line to research, fill out a group sheet with your grandparents as the parents, and record all their children. Keep repeating this process for as many ancestors (in the chosen line) as you recorded on your ancestor chart.
- 2) Look again! Have you truly exploited all materials you have at home that may bear genealogical fruit? Pictures, family Bibles, sales receipts, diaries, non-paper items such as military uniforms and retirement watches, can all yield important information. Have you interviewed all living relatives descended from the line you are researching?
- 3) Do your "presearch." Thoroughly study everything about the area where your ancestor lived. Dig into the region's history; find out what records are available and who has the records.
- 4) Hit the research road. Vital records such as birth, marriage and death records should be among the first official records to obtain. Two excellent reference books on how and where to obtain these records are Ancestry's red book: American state, county and town sources and The source: A guidebook of American genealogy, both published by Ancestry.

Probate records can be gold-mines. Look for revealing information other than just the named heirs.

Census records are the next major source to check. The federal census is taken every 10 years, beginning in 1790, and the 1930 census will be made public this year. Don't forget state censuses and special schedules such as agriculture and veterans schedules.

Land records may reveal relationships or, as important, confirm that an ancestor lived in a certain locale. Look for migration patterns. For example, in the mid-1800s the majority of Calhoun County residents came from New York.

Other published sources are abundant, as well. County histories, military records, city directories, ships passenger lists, family histories, genealogical periodicals ... the list is endless!

Sources checklist. Refer to a checklist of suggested sources and try to ensure that you have exhausted all sources for a particular line. Keep in mind these locations for sources: your home, your relatives, courthouses, libraries and archives, cemeteries, the Internet and so on.

- 5) Evaluate what you've learned. Evaluate carefully each piece of data you have gathered. A "preponderance of evidence" is what you're seeking — more than one document that will substantiate a hypothesis. Rate the reliability of information you've found. A death date found on a death certificate (created at the time of death), is more likely to be correct than a death date found on a tombstone (which may have been inscribed years later).

Documents can give you clues that point to another avenue of research. If a death certificate names a funeral home and/or cemetery, look there for more information.

Does the connection to a parent make sense? Have you found the only Mortimer Heathcliff in that locale, or is this an uncle or a nephew with the same name as the ancestor you are researching?

- 6) Do whole-family research. When you find yourself at a roadblock, make sure you've researched thoroughly all children of the ancestor you're stuck on. In the past, parents tended to live with their adult children in their senior years. So, for example, you may find your ancestor on a census record with one of their kids rather than the head of their own household. Next, try expanding your search to the siblings and even in-laws of the elusive ancestor. If your great-grandmother's probate record doesn't mention her sister, her brother's record just might. The same train of thought holds true for spouses and their families. If a will exists for an ancestor's in-law, check that also.

- 7) Remain open to the inexplicable! You may never

Common genealogical TERMS

by Anita Stuever, CCGS president

Every field of interest has its own vocabulary, and genealogy is no exception. Some of the more common terms used in genealogy are defined below.

ahnentafel a numbering system used to identify each individual in a family tree. The number of an individual's father is twice that individual's number; the mother is twice that individual's number plus one birth surname surname given at birth, formerly called maiden name, which is considered sexist

collateral line line of descent connecting persons who share a common ancestor, but are not in the direct line of descent

compiled record a record consisting of information drawn from original sources, other compiled records or verbal testimony (for example, a book titled History of the Wright Family or an online database such as the Social Security Death Index)

direct line line of descent traced through succeeding children (persons related to one another as parent and child)

emigrate to leave a country

immigrate to enter a country

intestate without a valid will, as in died intestate

liber book of public records

metes and bounds method of surveying property by using natural physical and topographical features in conjunction with measurements and artificially designated objects or places. Metes refers to measuring direction and distance; bounds refers to land features

nee or née born as, used to indicate the birth surname of a married woman primary source a source created at the time of an event, as opposed to a record created later (For example, a primary source for a birth date is a birth certificate. Other documents such as marriage and death certificates might include a date of birth, but are not considered primary sources for the birth date.)

probate legal process to establish the authenticity and validity of a will before the court authorizes distribution of an estate

secondary record a record created some time after an event (For example, marriage and death certificates are secondary sources for a birth date, because the birth took place long before these events.)

sexton the office of the person or persons in charge of a cemetery

sic Latin term written in square brackets to indicate that the preceding text, which may appear strange or incorrect, is quoted exactly

Soundex a system that gives names sound codes, using one letter followed by a three-digit number. Soundex groups names that sound similar, but have different spellings testate with a valid will, as in died testate

transcribe to make a written copy from an original source vital records documents that record major events of a person's life: birth, marriage, divorce, death ■

Common genealogical ABBREVIATIONS

by Anita Stuever, CCGS president

Genealogical publishers use a variety of abbreviations in their efforts to save space. Unfortunately, such abbreviations — numbering in the thousands — are not standardized. The abbreviation d. may mean died in one publication but day in another. You'll encounter different degrees of abbreviating, varying use of periods, Latin terms, acronyms and initialisms.

The only consolation is that you can expect publishers to be consistent within a publication.

To help you sort out this alphabet soup, common abbreviations used in genealogy are explained below. Probably the most complete list of genealogical abbreviations is Abbreviations and acronyms: A guide for family historians, compiled by Kip Sperry and published by Ancestry in 2000.

What's the difference between an acronym and an initialism? Acronyms can be pronounced (NARA), while initialisms cannot (FHL).

adj. adjoining or adjoins

aft. after

b. born or birth, or bachelor

bapt. or ba. or bp. baptize(d) or baptism

bd birth date

1877 History of Calhoun County to be reprinted

Prepublication orders being accepted

The Calhoun County Genealogical Society is pleased to announce a second reprinting of the 1877 History of Calhoun County, Michigan. The society reprinted the work in 1998 and sold out. Prepublication orders are being accepted now for $50 plus $5 shipping and handling. After April 1, the price of the book will be $55 plus $5. Michigan residents add 6 percent sales tax.

Originally published by L.H. Everts, Philadelphia, this beautiful book details the settlement of Calhoun County from the early 1830s to 1877. Antique copies have become increasingly difficult to find. With more than 350 pages, the book contains 212 written pages plus 108 pages of illustrations "descriptive of its scenery, palatial residences and public buildings, fine blocks and important manufactories," as well as portrait sketches of many early residents of the county. The book includes detailed written histories of every township in the county, as well as biographical sketches of early inhabitants. First published 125 years ago, many of these reminiscences are first-hand accounts by actual settlers. In addition, the republished volume will include an every-name index, printed with permission of the compilers, CCGS members Susan Udell and Marcia Udell. The black and white book is being reproduced on acid-free, archival paper, and is hard-cover, library-quality bound. ■

Creating effective queries

by Anita Stuever, CCGS president

Carefully crafted genealogical queries can bring rewarding results. Taking time and care in writing a query will give it a better chance of reaching others who are researching the same family name or subject. Successful queries are specific, to the point and easy to understand.

Generations publishes queries free of charge for people with known Calhoun County connections. Queries may also be submitted to genealogy magazines, newspapers or web sites. Thousands of web sites have query areas or message boards where researchers can post questions.

Guidelines for creating effective queries

- Focus on one individual, family, surname, event, location or research problem.
- Begin by clearly stating what specific information you seek, such as "Need date and location for marriage of Mr. Abigail WOODWARD and Elizabeth BOYCE."
- Avoid false leads by listing information you know about that person or problem, including dates (estimates if necessary) and locations. Exclude extraneous information such as unrelated surnames.
- Type your query in short phrases, using common genealogical abbreviations. Type the surname in CAPITAL letters, but never type the entire text in all capitals or all lower-case letters.
- End with your name and the contact information you want made public. Include an e-mail address that will not change.
- When e-mailing queries, use the subject line to give a synopsis to help recipients make connections. Users of active e-mail lists make quick decisions about whether to read messages; those with no subject or nonspecific subject lines are usually not read.

- Send your query to an appropriate publication or query board based on geographic area, surname, historical event or other category.

Example of a poor query, sent to British Isles message board

Looking for any and all information about my GGGG grandmother Elizabeth Boyce, who was born in England. Please contact me if you recognize the name.
AnitaStuever@voyager.net.

Example of a good query, sent to Franklin Co., N.Y.

Seeking birth record and parentage of William W. WOODWARD, b. Ft. Covington, N.Y., 28 Nov 1822, bef. N.Y. State collected birth records. His parents migrated from England to Canada or USA (boundaries may have changed) bef. 1823. Please contact Anita Stuever of Mich., USA:

Attorney General rules that genealogists' research hours cannot be restricted

County clerks' offices cannot impose more restrictive schedules for genealogical research, according to an opinion released Dec. 6 by Michigan Attorney General Jennifer Granholm. Before the ruling, some counties allowed certain groups more liberal access to records, but restricted times that genealogists could access the same records. ■
